

GREAT EXCITEMENT

Prevails at Walla Walla Over the Lynching

OF THE MURDEROUS GAMBLER

Who Shot a Soldier in a Row Over a Game of Cards—The Civil Authorities Call Upon the Military for Aid in Preserving Order.

WALLA WALLA, WASH., April 20.—Great excitement still prevails in this city over the lynching of Hunt, last night, by the soldiers of Superior. Judge Upson has called on Col. Compton commanding Fort Walla Walla, for aid in ferreting out the guilty parties and bringing them to justice.

Col. Compton said he would lend all aid in his power, and that only the misconception of the gravity of the situation on his part prevented his taking more prompt action to prevent the trouble.

Col. Compton suggested the action of the mob as a disgrace to himself, his officers, the troops and the entire army.

The grand jury has been summoned to inquire into the tragedy.

The Prosecuting Attorney to day telegraphed to the Secretary of War stating that the military authorities were unable to prevent the mob from carrying out their purpose, through the aid of the soldiers.

tion taken. Last evening the Sheriff and Protecting Attorney received what they regard as authentic information that the plot had been laid by the following persons: James A. Moore; two gypsies, P. J. and John; and Ben Taylor, and to demolish two gambling houses.

When the facts were communicated to Colonel Compton he issued an order to the mounted police to be alerted at the post until further order, and that a check roll call be made every hour throughout the night until the danger of further mob violence is passed. We are confident that the mounted police are ready to repel any attack made by the soldiers.

The President had a conference with Brigadier General Ruger late this afternoon. General San Francisco is regard to the situation in the city of San Francisco, Wash., by a party of soldiers last Friday night, and subse-

Telegram to the Secretary of War at Washington:

"The address of Walla Walla is very disreputable in army discipline. There is no reason, as appears, that the mob was composed of soldiers, and a court of inquiry, and that, the responsibility for the riot is placed on the shoulders of the guilty men brought to a prompt trial."

THE UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.

Two Local Cases of that Number at Dinner.

A Sad Coincidence.

While a few young gentlemen were conversing with several young ladies yesterday afternoon while making a call, the social happenings of the past week were brought up for discussion, and an incident of a dinner party was told. Seats had been arranged for thirteen guests, and when the dinner began the number reduced the number to thirteen. One of the young ladies would not permit that unlucky number to be seated.

The number of the table and the gentlemen that he had, on a Sunday last, all, been one at a dinner party at which thirteen were seated. The dinner was nearly over when the fact was noted and then several offered, and almost insisted, on leaving the table. Among these was the same lady that occupied the same place by herself at a dinner last week, but the matter was turned into a joke and the number remained at the dinner.

Col. George F. Bissell was a guest, and, as usual, he was the only one who remained. The Colonel was not at all superstitious regarding this number, and it was through his persuasion that the company was kept intact.

The number thirteen does not strengthen the faith in the superstition that it was wrong to have thirteen, but it was certainly a striking coincidence.

An Unfortunate Nuisance.

have decided that they will not do anything towards keeping the saloons closed on Sundays, yet they should at least make an effort to bind the patrons of the saloons from blockading the sidewalks and the side doors to the saloons. They can send the patrons either in the morning or in the evening on the street and they should do it.

At all day yesterday the sidewalk along Main street from Tenth to Eleventh on the west side of the street was filled with ugly waiting a chance to enter the side doors of some one of the saloons along that thoroughfare. They were for the most part either drunk or in such a condition as to feel that they were entitled to pass among them was very annoying. Their language was of the sort that justices of the peace fine women for. The police force is so small that it is impossible for the police force to take no cognizance of it.

What goes on in the saloons is not an affair of the saloons alone, but the freedom of the streets should not be given to a class of drunken brutes.

special to the Intelligencer from the funeral home. Mrs. Jeannette Thompson Davies, wife of David M. Davies, who died Thursday, was buried from her late home yesterday afternoon.

A large number of relatives and friends gathered at the funeral home to attend the funeral. Mrs. Davies was born in Scotland, but her parents came to this country when she was quite young and settled in Beloit, Wis. She was married since released. She was the mother of five children, and two daughters and one son and her husband survive her. Mrs. Davies was a member of the Presbyterian church, and many of those in needy circumstances who were befriended by her were present at the funeral services.

Henry Street Car Crash.

There were only six cars running around the loop yesterday, and three on Henry street. The cars, these cars were, however, crowded and, at the day, the people being out in their spring clothes in great numbers. The travel was principally to and from the North Western and the Ohio and the Ohio City ferry were crowded.

people went to the South Side, and as many more walked nimbly about the island. Those who had carriages went out the pike back of the city and Bridgeport, and great crowds visited the Park.
